ON THE FARM...

A sure sign spring is just around the corner is new life on the farm. This year is no different as we are gearing up for sixteen new bustling baby calves to arrive in March and April. However, our anticipation became an unexpected surprise late one winter's eve. As Pat finished the evening milking, he noticed a cow in labor, although she wasn't due to calve for 5 more weeks. He left the barn to let her progress on her own for awhile, concerned that the outcome might be a miscarriage.

Upon his return, to his surprise, a fuzzy little bundle greeted him with a bellow. The bull (male) calf weighed 50-60 pounds (normal birth weight 90-100 pounds) but was alert and vigorous. We've decided he was destined to be born early because he jumps out of his pen regularly and we think maybe he just decided to jump out of mama!

Two other healthy baby heifer (girl) calves have also arrived early. One was 10 days early and the other five days ahead of schedule.

Field conditions have been dusty dry until the recent heavy, wet snow. That relieves some concern about the lack of adequate moisture for spring planting and pasture growth.
